Autumn's Rites

Fall sights include (L) the Shelton Jazz Band performing in the atrium, Jeannine Collins's witches floating in the Copy Center and the crowning of the Homecoming Queen (last year's winner Amy Newton by 1999's Kim Cockrell)

By Pamela Laseter and the Courier Staff

Shelton State will celebrate its fourth annual Homecoming on Nov. 5-8. As part of the celebration a Homecoming Queen will be selected.

This year's Shelton State homecoming will include four days of fun on the lawn and will conclude with a basketball game against Gadsden State.

Assistant Dean of Students Susan Mohun encourages all qualified girls to sign up for homecoming queen. Nominations for Homecoming Queen will be accepted from student organizations, college departments, individual classes, or individuals.

Applications may be picked up in the Counseling Center on the Martin Campus and in the Main Office of the Fredd Campus.

Deadline for nominations is Friday, Oct. 26, at noon. Applications will be accepted in the Public Relations Department, on the 3rd floor, room 3633.

"The basketball team is working hard and will play their first regular season game the week of homecoming," said Mohun. The voting for homecoming queen is Monday, Nov. 5.

This year's homecoming activity itinerary is as follows: Monday, November 5, voting for homecoming queen on the Fredd Campus and homecoming queen finalists will be introduced on the Martin Campus.

Tuesday, Nov. 6, voting for homecoming queen on the Martin Campus, a retiree's luncheon and a Terrific Tuesday concert.

Wednesday, Nov. 7, voting for homecoming queen on the Martin Campus and a kickboxing exhibition in the 'Love' for Adopt-a-School comes to the 'fore'

Golf and tennis teams from Shelton State took first place in the recent Adopt-a-School Tournament held Oct. 18 at the Country Club of Tuscaloosa.

The golfing foursome of Diane Layton, Lea Green, Matt Terry and Chris Sanford, however, won the second prize after matching cards after tying first with a sterling 12-under performance.

No ties were in the offing for Shelton counselor Jan Dean (R in picture) who along with partner Sara Cooke took first in the C Division. They won 22 of 30 games.

Shelton's adopt-a-school partner is Hillcrest Middle School.

Anthrax is all over the news these days. At least three people have died from the infections and perhaps hundreds have been infected. This seems to be scaring the country into hysteria. Or is it?

A survey of randomly selected students was taken recently.

And students were asked the question, "Do you think the known cases of anthrax infection are caused by individual terrorists or does a country sponsor them?"

Of those that responded, 61 percent said that the terrorists were an individuals, not country sponsored.

Amber Richards, a student here at Shelton State said, "Osama bin-Laden has enough money to have been able to back this operation on his own. He doesn't need any help from a country."

Of the responses, 36 percent said that they think a country sponsors the terrorists involved in the anthrax scare.

The War

Students were also asked the question, "Do you think the U.S. Government will be able to eliminate the threat of biological terrorism?" To this question, 36 percent of the students surveyed responded with yes.

Seth Curtis, student, said, "I do believe that biological terrorism can be stopped but not by the U.S. Government alone. It will take Americans everywhere standing together under one banner to fully eliminate this threat."

Sixty-four percent responded with no. Chasity Reach, a student, said, "I think the government could handle the threat of biological terrorism better if (the government) would worry more about what was going on here for a little while instead of worrying about the welfare of foreign places."

When asked if they themselves were afraid of being infected, 32 percent of the students surveyed responded with yes. None of these students wished to comment, however.

Of the students surveyed, 64 percent responded to the same question with no. Zach Gable, another student, said, "I have a better chance of playing in the NBA next season than I do of catching anthrax."

Other students have the same thoughts. April Crossland said, it's a little harder to get infected than the press lets on. I think I have a better chance of being murdered than of contracting anthrax. "The government continues to comment that the anthrax situation is not out of control. Some students agree.

Some disagree. What do you think? Contact the courier with your comments by phone at 391-2406 or e-mail at courier@shelton.cc.al.us.

"Keep Looking Up!"

By Dr. Lee Albritton

Late fall and winter's night time sky has a particular treat a cluster of seven bright stars that we commonly call the "Seven Sisters" but officially this grouping is the Pleiades! I'll bet that as a child your grandparents taught you to find this magnificent sight in the cool, dear skies of late October around Halloween!

To find the "Seven Sisters" simply look almost due east about two hours after the sunsets. This grouping of stars is officially referred to as an open or Galactic Cluster. Open is used because this type has a small number of stars compared to a Globular Cluster which can have several million stars. The Pleiades has a total of three dozen stars with seven of them being real bright. Galactic is used because this type of cluster is found in the plane of our Milky Way Galaxy.

The Pleiades is located in the constellation Taurus the bull. To find the head of the bull simply look below the "Seven Sisters" for a v-shaped group of stars. Extend each side of the V and two stars can be found that represents the tip of Taurus's horns!

Native Americans have two legends about the Pleiades. In one the seven bright stars represent the teepees of seven young brothers who were put in the sky! In the other they represent seven maiden who were trying to escape a bear and climbed the Devil's Tower a rock formation in Wyoming.

A bear clawed the sides of the rock trying to get the maidens and according to this legend that is why the sides of the formation are shaped as they are. You might remember that the Devil's tower was featured in the science fiction movie Close Encounters of the Third Kind!

Keep looking up and have fun finding the sisters, brothers, or maidens depending on the legend in our beautiful fall skies! When locating the Pleiades, be sure to look out for Taurus the bull!

It is winter 1919 and in Drowning Ruth, Christina Schwarz's new novel (her first), Amanda Starkey has returned from her nursing job in a military hospital to seek emotional shelter in her childhood home in rural Wisconsin. No rest for Amanda when her older sister is discovered drowned in a nearby lake.

In Ghost Soldiers by Hampton Sides, we get the gripping account of the WWII mission carried out by the 6th Ranger Battalion to rescue survivors of the Bataan Death March. Along with military operations in the Philippines of 1944, you get insight into the espionage that preceded the operation, including priests and a cabaret owner acting as spies.

Diana Mott Davidson (sometimes referred to as The Julia Child of Mystery Writers) is back and in her latest Sticks and Scones caterer Goldy Schulz has accepted a series of jobs providing authentic Elizabethan dinners at Hyde Castle (it's located in Aspen but was brought over stone by stone from England). First day on the job Goldy is awakened by a shotgun blast through her window and as she's checking the tables a corpse is found in the adjacent creek.

Atrium.

Thursday, Nov. 8, there will be games on the lawn such as volleyball, frisbee, and flag football (equipment provided). Dualing drummers will perform in the atrium, followed by a pep rally at 12:30 pm.

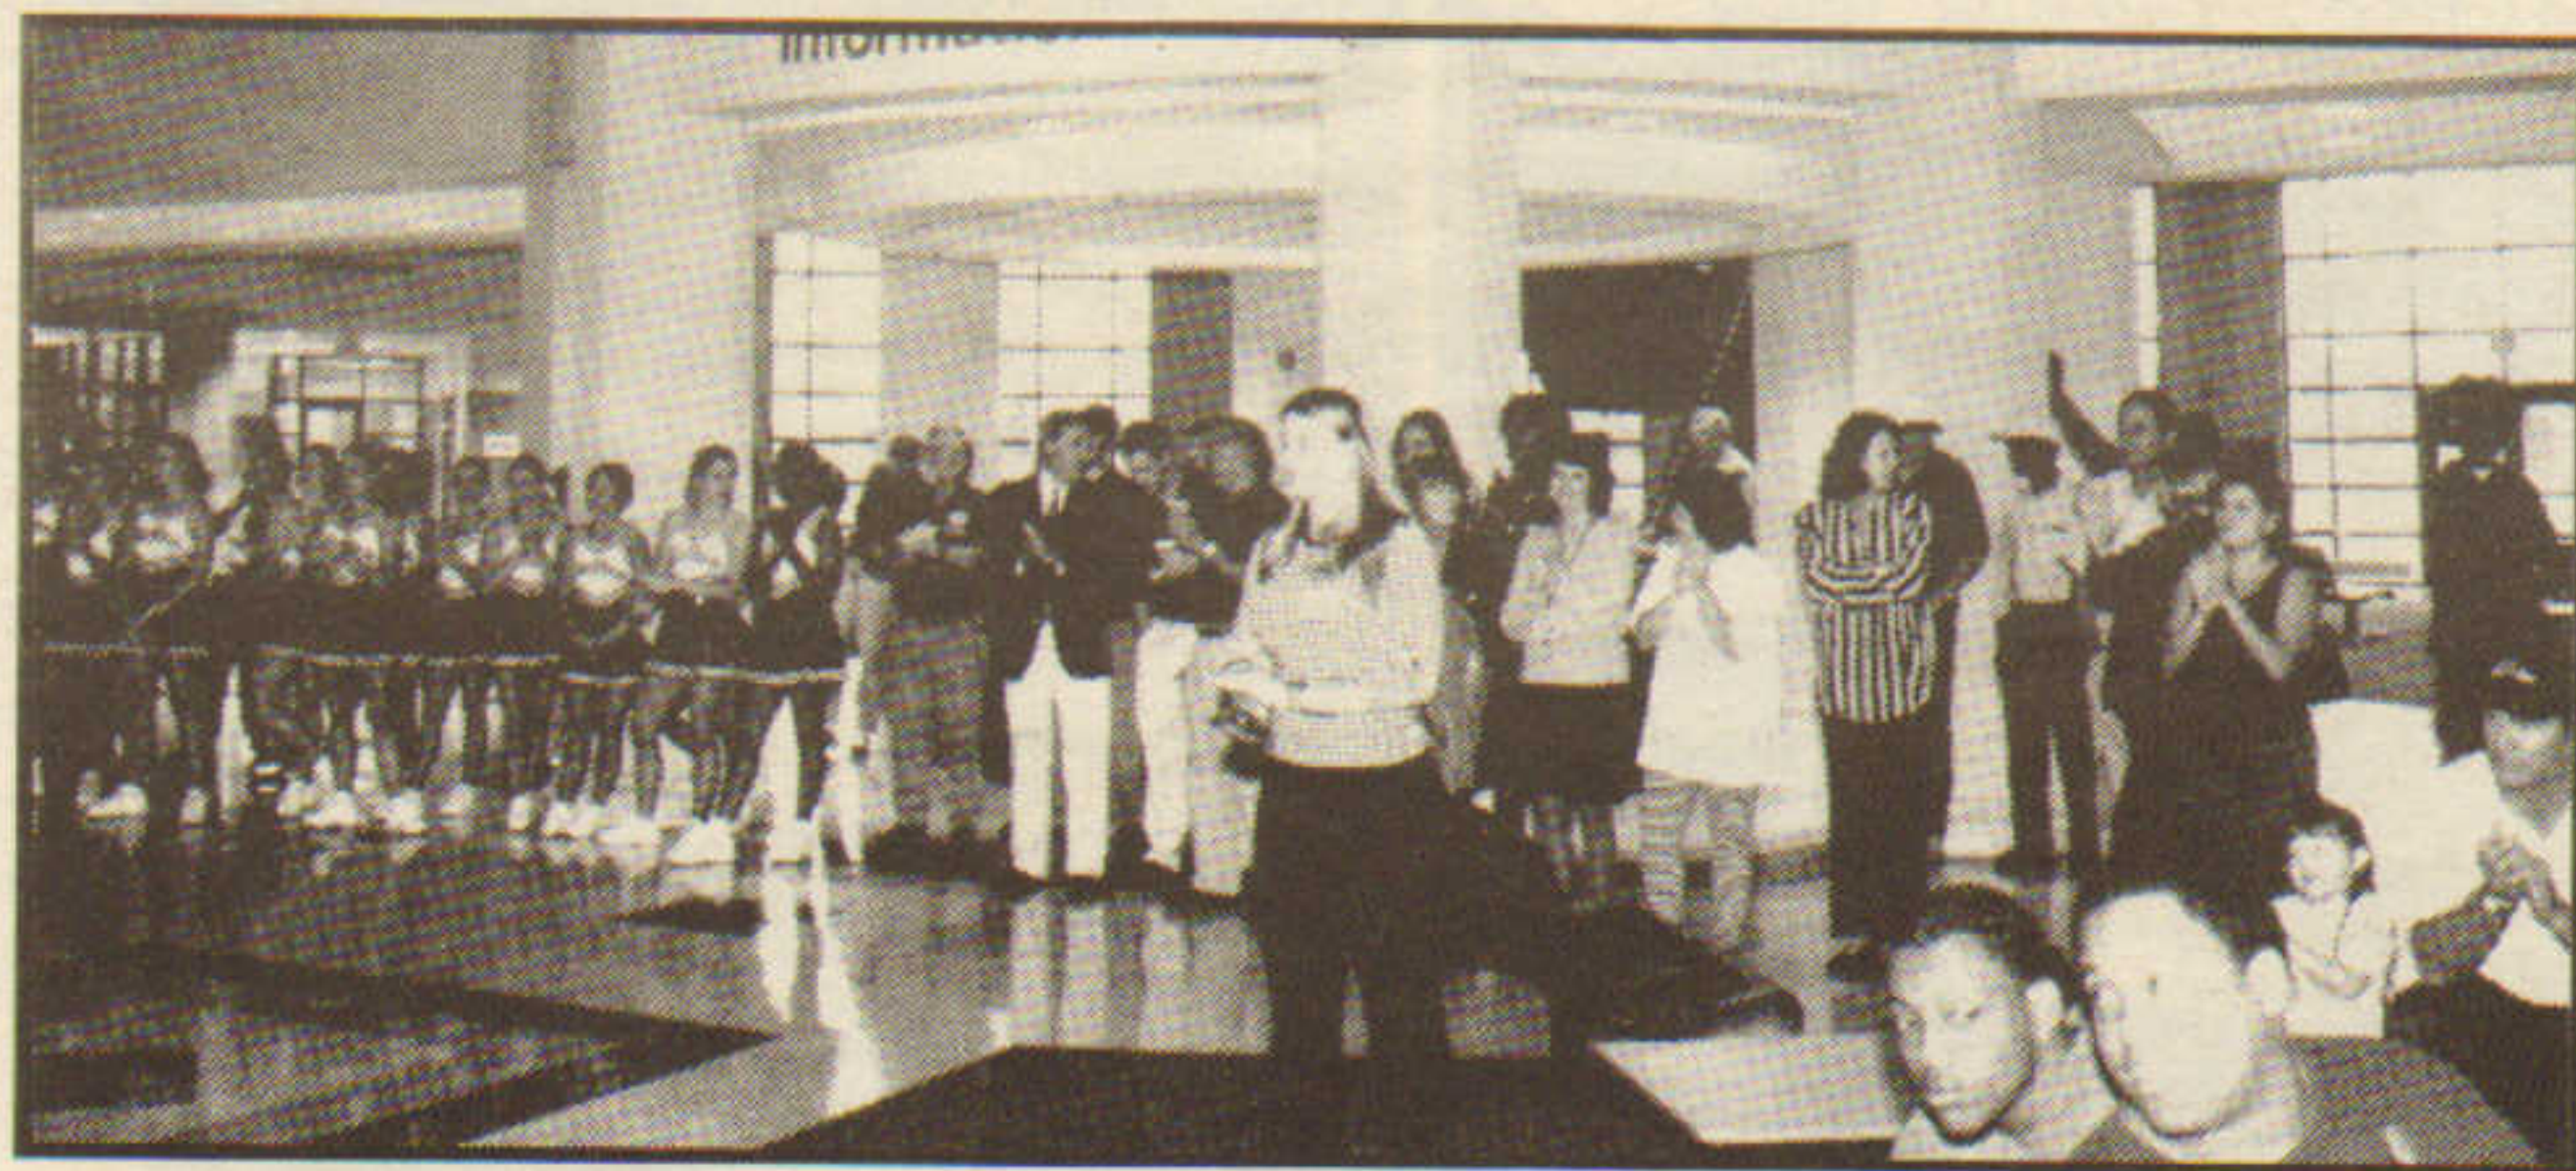

The evening's grand finale will be the basketball game against Gadsden State, and the 2001 Shelton State homecoming queen will be crowned at halftime.

Other fall sights and sounds include the annual infestation by witches in the Copy Center. Jeannine Collins, usually the model of speed and efficiency, allows her broom-bedecked cohorts to disturb business as usual with their raucous cackles.

"I didn't want to fool with them this year, but about mid October people start asking about them and I have to put them up. I guess it's become I kind of tradition," said Collins. All it takes is a short burst of applause to see the witches rock or fly and hear their piercing laugh.

When the semester gets going good, you can also be sure to see Shelton's Jazz Band set up in the atrium for a Terrific Tuesday concert. The concert on Oct. 23 seemed one of their best to the good crowd that gathered, with burst of applause following every inspired solo.

Everyone who attended last year's pep rally had a great time in the college's atrium

Courier to publish Maxwell's Crossing, creative issue, once again for the holidays

All of the college's potential Hemingways, Faulkners, Frosts and Picassos are urged to prepare their best work for submission to Maxwell's Crossing, the Courier's annual creative issue scheduled for publishing on Dec. 6.

The special issue will remain on the newsstands until Jan. 17.

Bring your submissions of short stories, poetry, essays and art work to the Courier office in Rm. 2319.

Deadline for submission is Nov. 21. Selection of material will be done by the Courier staff and by members of the college's English department.

Stepping Out proves a worthy heir to Theatre Tuscaloosa tradition

Commentary By the Courier
Staff

A night out to a Theatre Tuscaloosa production may not be the same as an evening spent fighting the crowds of Broadway, but it's close enough.

Theatre-goers who have witnessed performance at New York's mecca or, say, at the Old Vic in London may rhapsodize about the heights a great actor may have obtained during a given show.

Sets might be more lavish than you'll see in Tuscaloosa.

We cannot claim that TT is professional at all.

But the word is competence.

Stepping Out, like its predecessors in the calvalcade of productions over the last 30 years (and especially the last 20 when Paul Looney has been in charge), gave the audience a solid taste of what audiences would see that paid much more than the $15 charged by this community group.

One reason for the "professional caliber" experience is that Tuscaloosa is blest with an abundance of acting talent.

The next TT production will be presented with the Tuscaloosa Community Dancer. It's The Nutcracker from Nov. 30-Dec. 9. Don't miss it!

—The Buccaneers are Here to Play—

Shelton soccer team 'heading' to tourney

By Adam Jaffe

As the end of soccer season dies down the Lady Bucs are still running strong.

After a rough loss on Oct. 19 to Hinds Junior College the Lady Bucs are preparing to compete in a district tournament. On Nov. 2nd the Lady Bucs will depart Tuscaloosa on their twelve hour journey to North Carolina; Shelton will play against the district winners of Mississippi. As Shelton takes on the team from Mississippi, North Carolina will be playing the district winners from Georgia.

Coach Nellie Christian saw many improvements throughout the season. "The season started off slow but the team progressed well as the season went on," said Coach Christian. "I really wish we had ten more games to play but, the girls had fun and finished the regular season strong." "We have great athletes with excellent talent, we want to do as best as we can to represent Shelton State in the tournament" said Christian.

One aspect of Shelton having a women's soccer team is that it is the only womens soccer team in the state of Alabama at the community college level. Recruiting potential is very challenging considering there are eight to ten major schools in the state that offer soccer programs as well. Majority of the recruiting comes from within the state, while one Lady Buc was signed out of Kentucky.

Buccaneers win Gadsden tourney

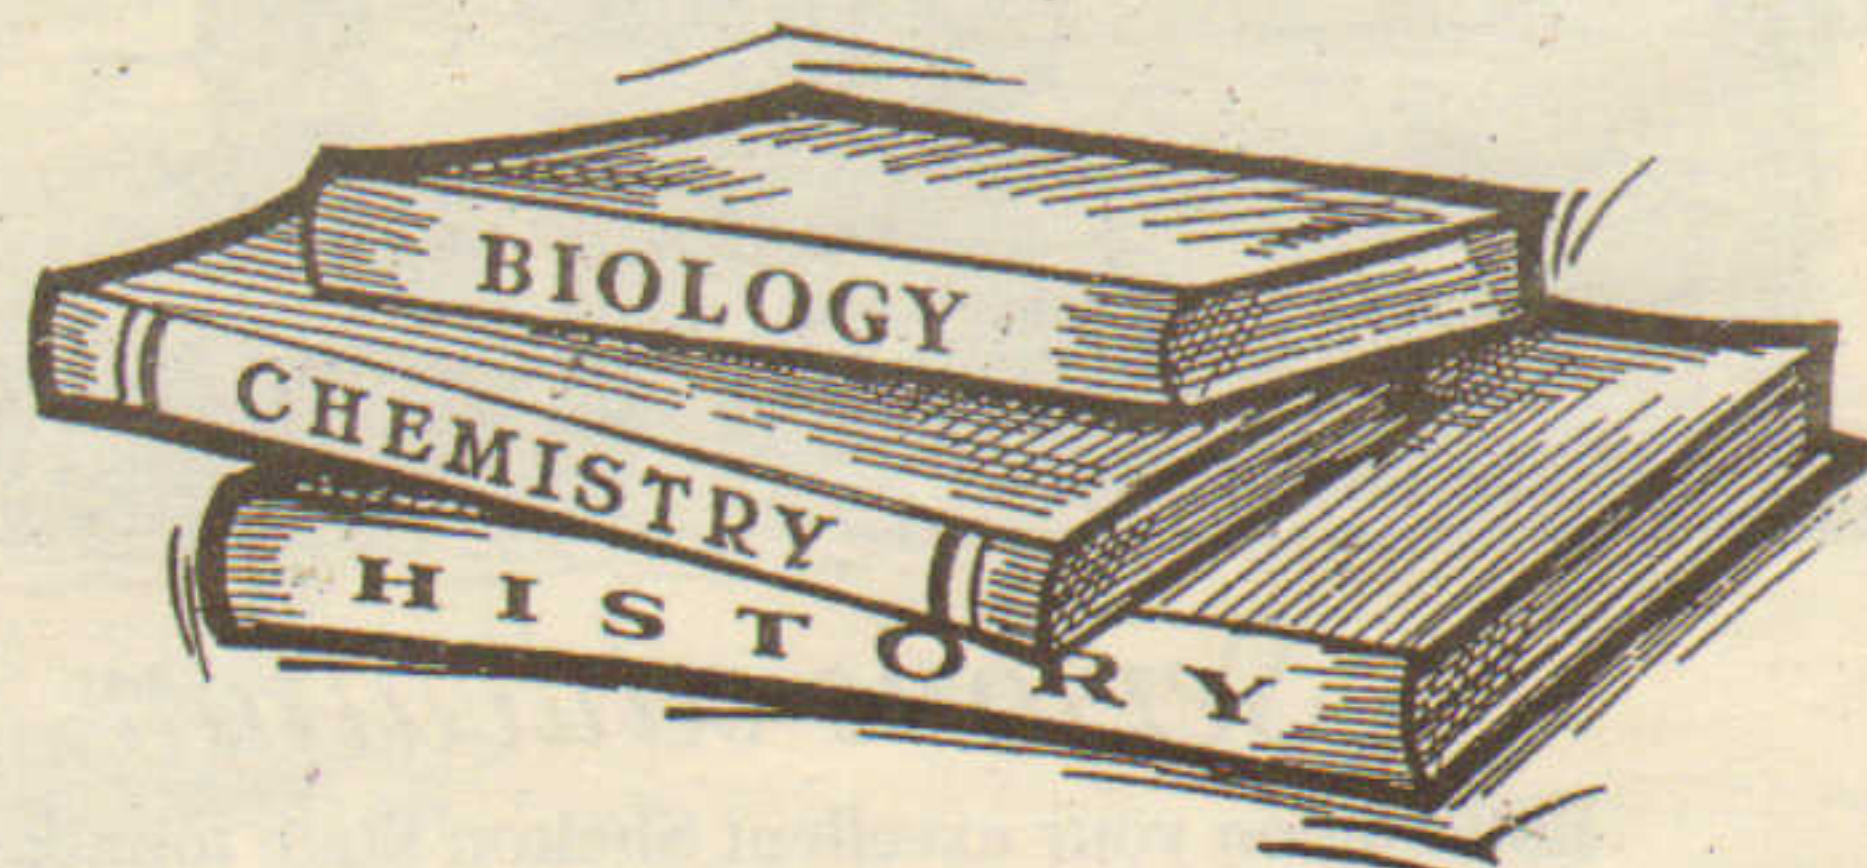

The Shelton golf team shot a 294 in the final round on Oct. 23 to win the Gadsden State Fall Invitational men's junior college tournament at Silver Lakes Golf Club.

Shelton, ranked number 2 in the country, finished with a total of 586. Wallace of Hanceville finished second in the seven-team tournament, two strokes back.

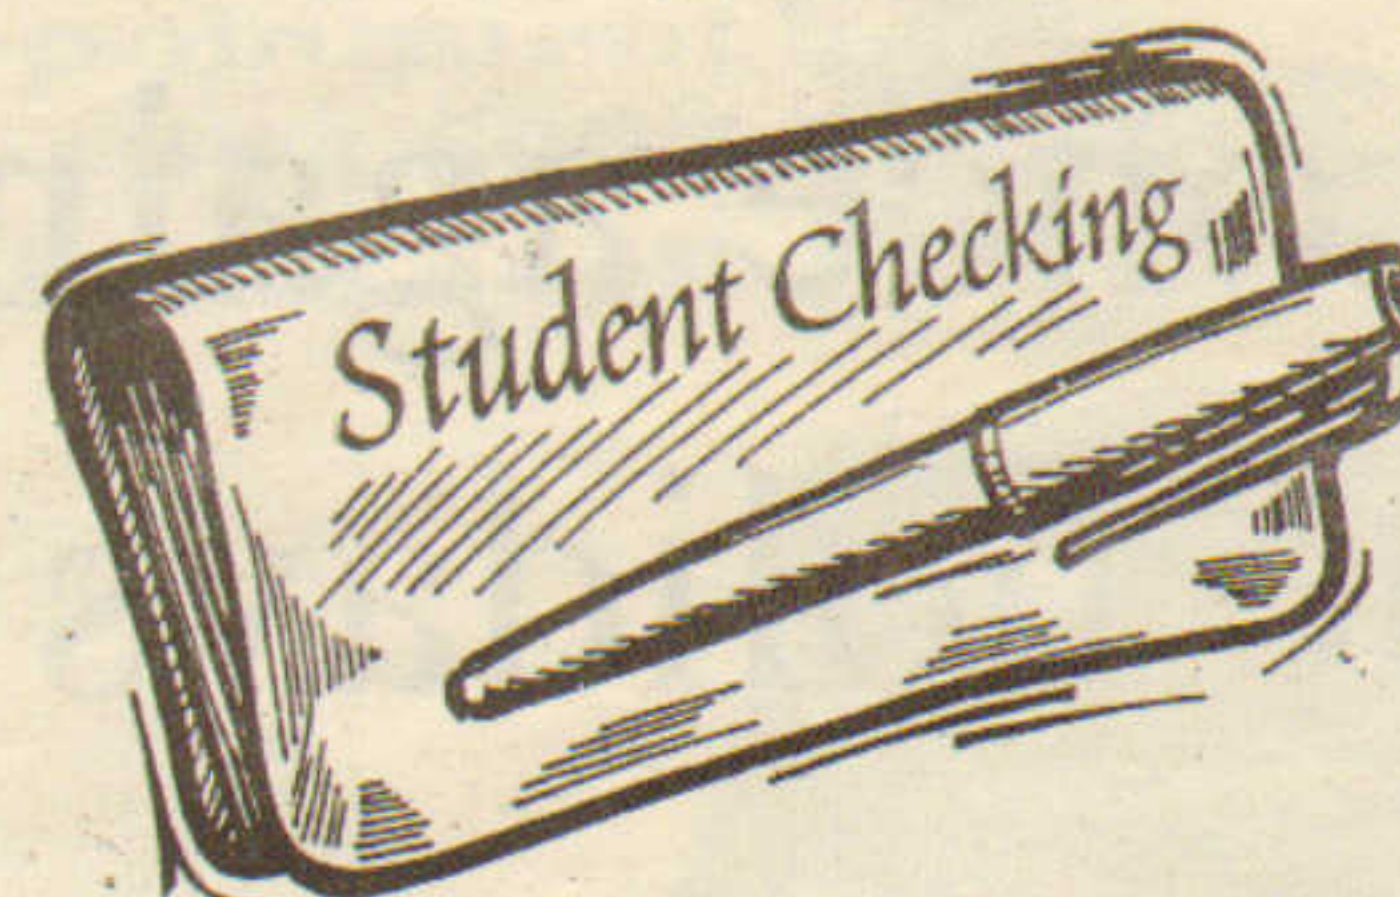

Pope Spruiell led the Bucs on the final day with a 70, while Calle Andren had a 72, Will Taylor 73, David Rasco 79 and Jason Davidson 82. Andren finished fourth individually with a total of 145.

Shelton will participate in the Alabama Intercollegiate Tournament on Sunday, Oct. 28 at the Cypress Lakes Country Club in Muscle Shoals.

Shelton Singers concert set for Nov. 11

The Shelton Singers will hold their annual fall concert on Sunday, Nov. 11. This year they will be doing the "Gloria" by Antonio Vivaldi with Chamber Orchestra at Covenant Presbyterian Church. Mark Brown is the conductor.

Glinda Blackshear will be a soloist along with Jennifer Wyatt Blackwell, one of Shelton's former students.

Also, the Shelton Singers were one of three choirs who sang the fourth movement of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony with the Tuscaloosa Symphony Orchestra recently.

Judy Johnson proves unbeatable in miniature racing

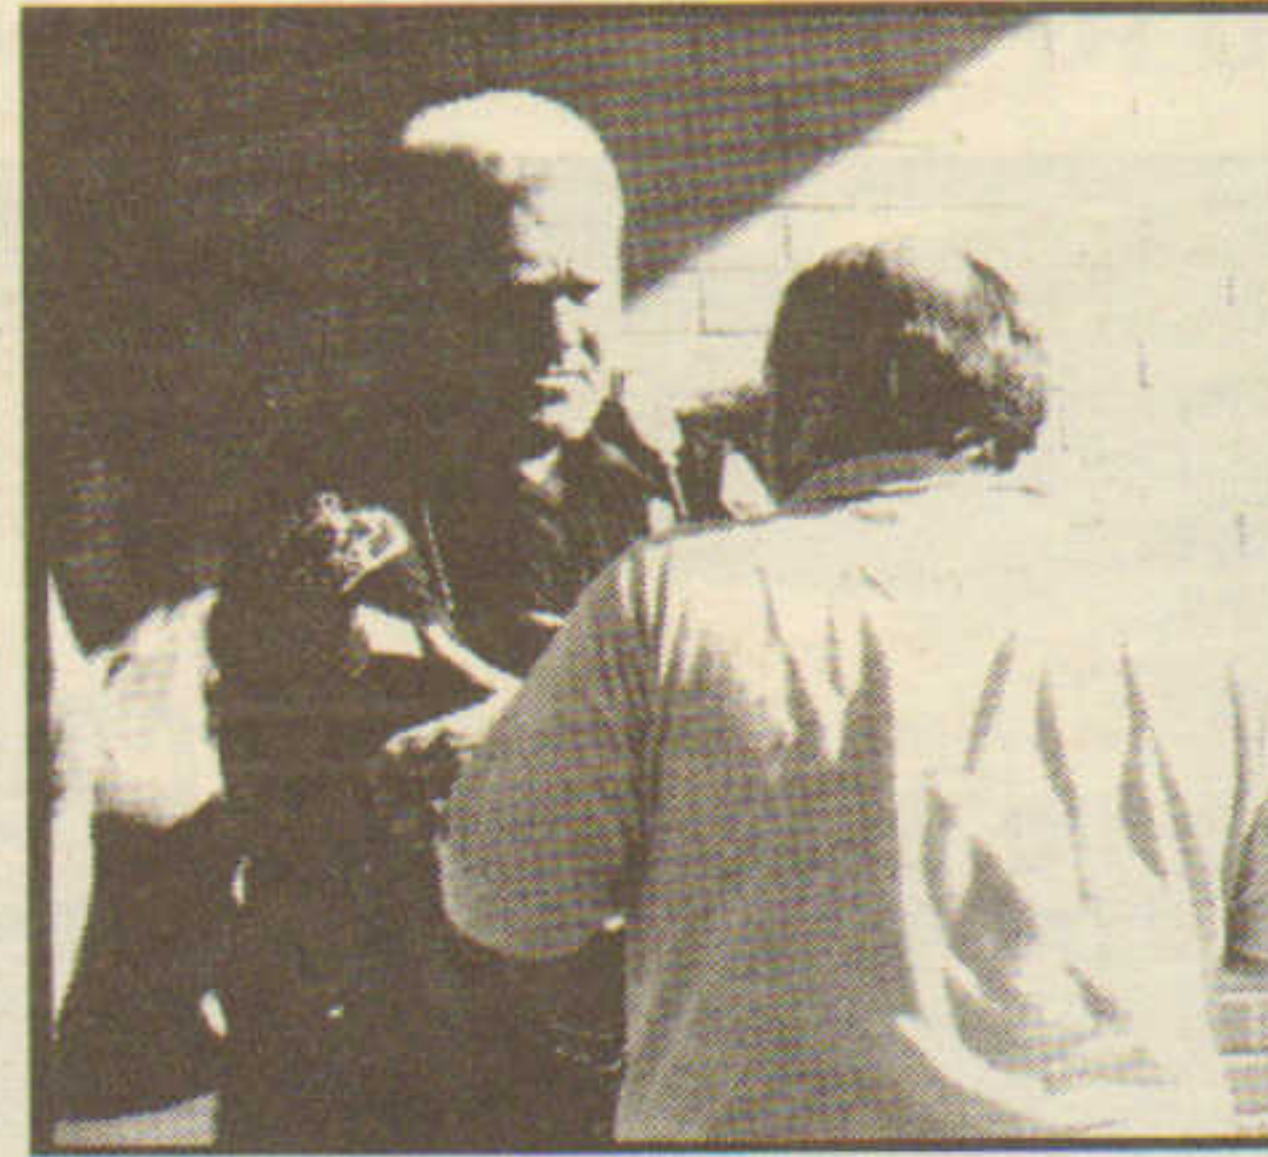

"I didn't do it for the tickets, I did it for the fun of it," said Shelton Booksore manager Judy Johnson who proved to be the best in the school at controlling the remote-control cars.

Sponsored by the Quality Council, the races involved participation by several faculty, staff members and students. The funds raised were for the Student Emergency Fund.

Johnson defeated Dean Humphrey Lee, Bill Stringfellow and some students.

Johnson gave her Saturday and Sunday tickets to Brandi Delbridge, a co-worker in the bookstore.

Courier checks out hoax call during anthrax scare

Courier staffer Adam Jaffe talks to a Tuscaloosa policeman at the Greyhound Bus station

A bizarre incident on Wednesday, Oct. 17 shook things up in the Courier office.

New staff member Adam Jaffe received a call purportedly from a cell phone on a Greyhound bus saying that there was a package to be delivered to him.

The caller, using a Middle-Eastern accent, also called the police department and asked them to be there when the package arrived.

Jaffe and staff member Chris Bunn went to Greyhound, talked to police and deduced it was a hoax.

Homeless Animal Jamboree set for Nov. 4

Metro Animal Shelter joins animal rescue groups, other shelters, and humane societies across Alabama to encourage adopting shelter or rescue pet.

On Sunday, Nov. 4 from noon until 5 p.m. many homeless dogs and cats will be waiting for a home on the University of Alabama's quad. Metro Animal Shelter will be conducting on-site adoptions at this event.

Breed rescue groups will bring information on how to adopt a pet from their organizations, and there will also be a fly-ball demonstration.

The Shelter staff urges everyone to come out and support Metro Animal Shelter.

The Wellness Center is another option for students who want to cultivate body and mind

The Second of Two Parts

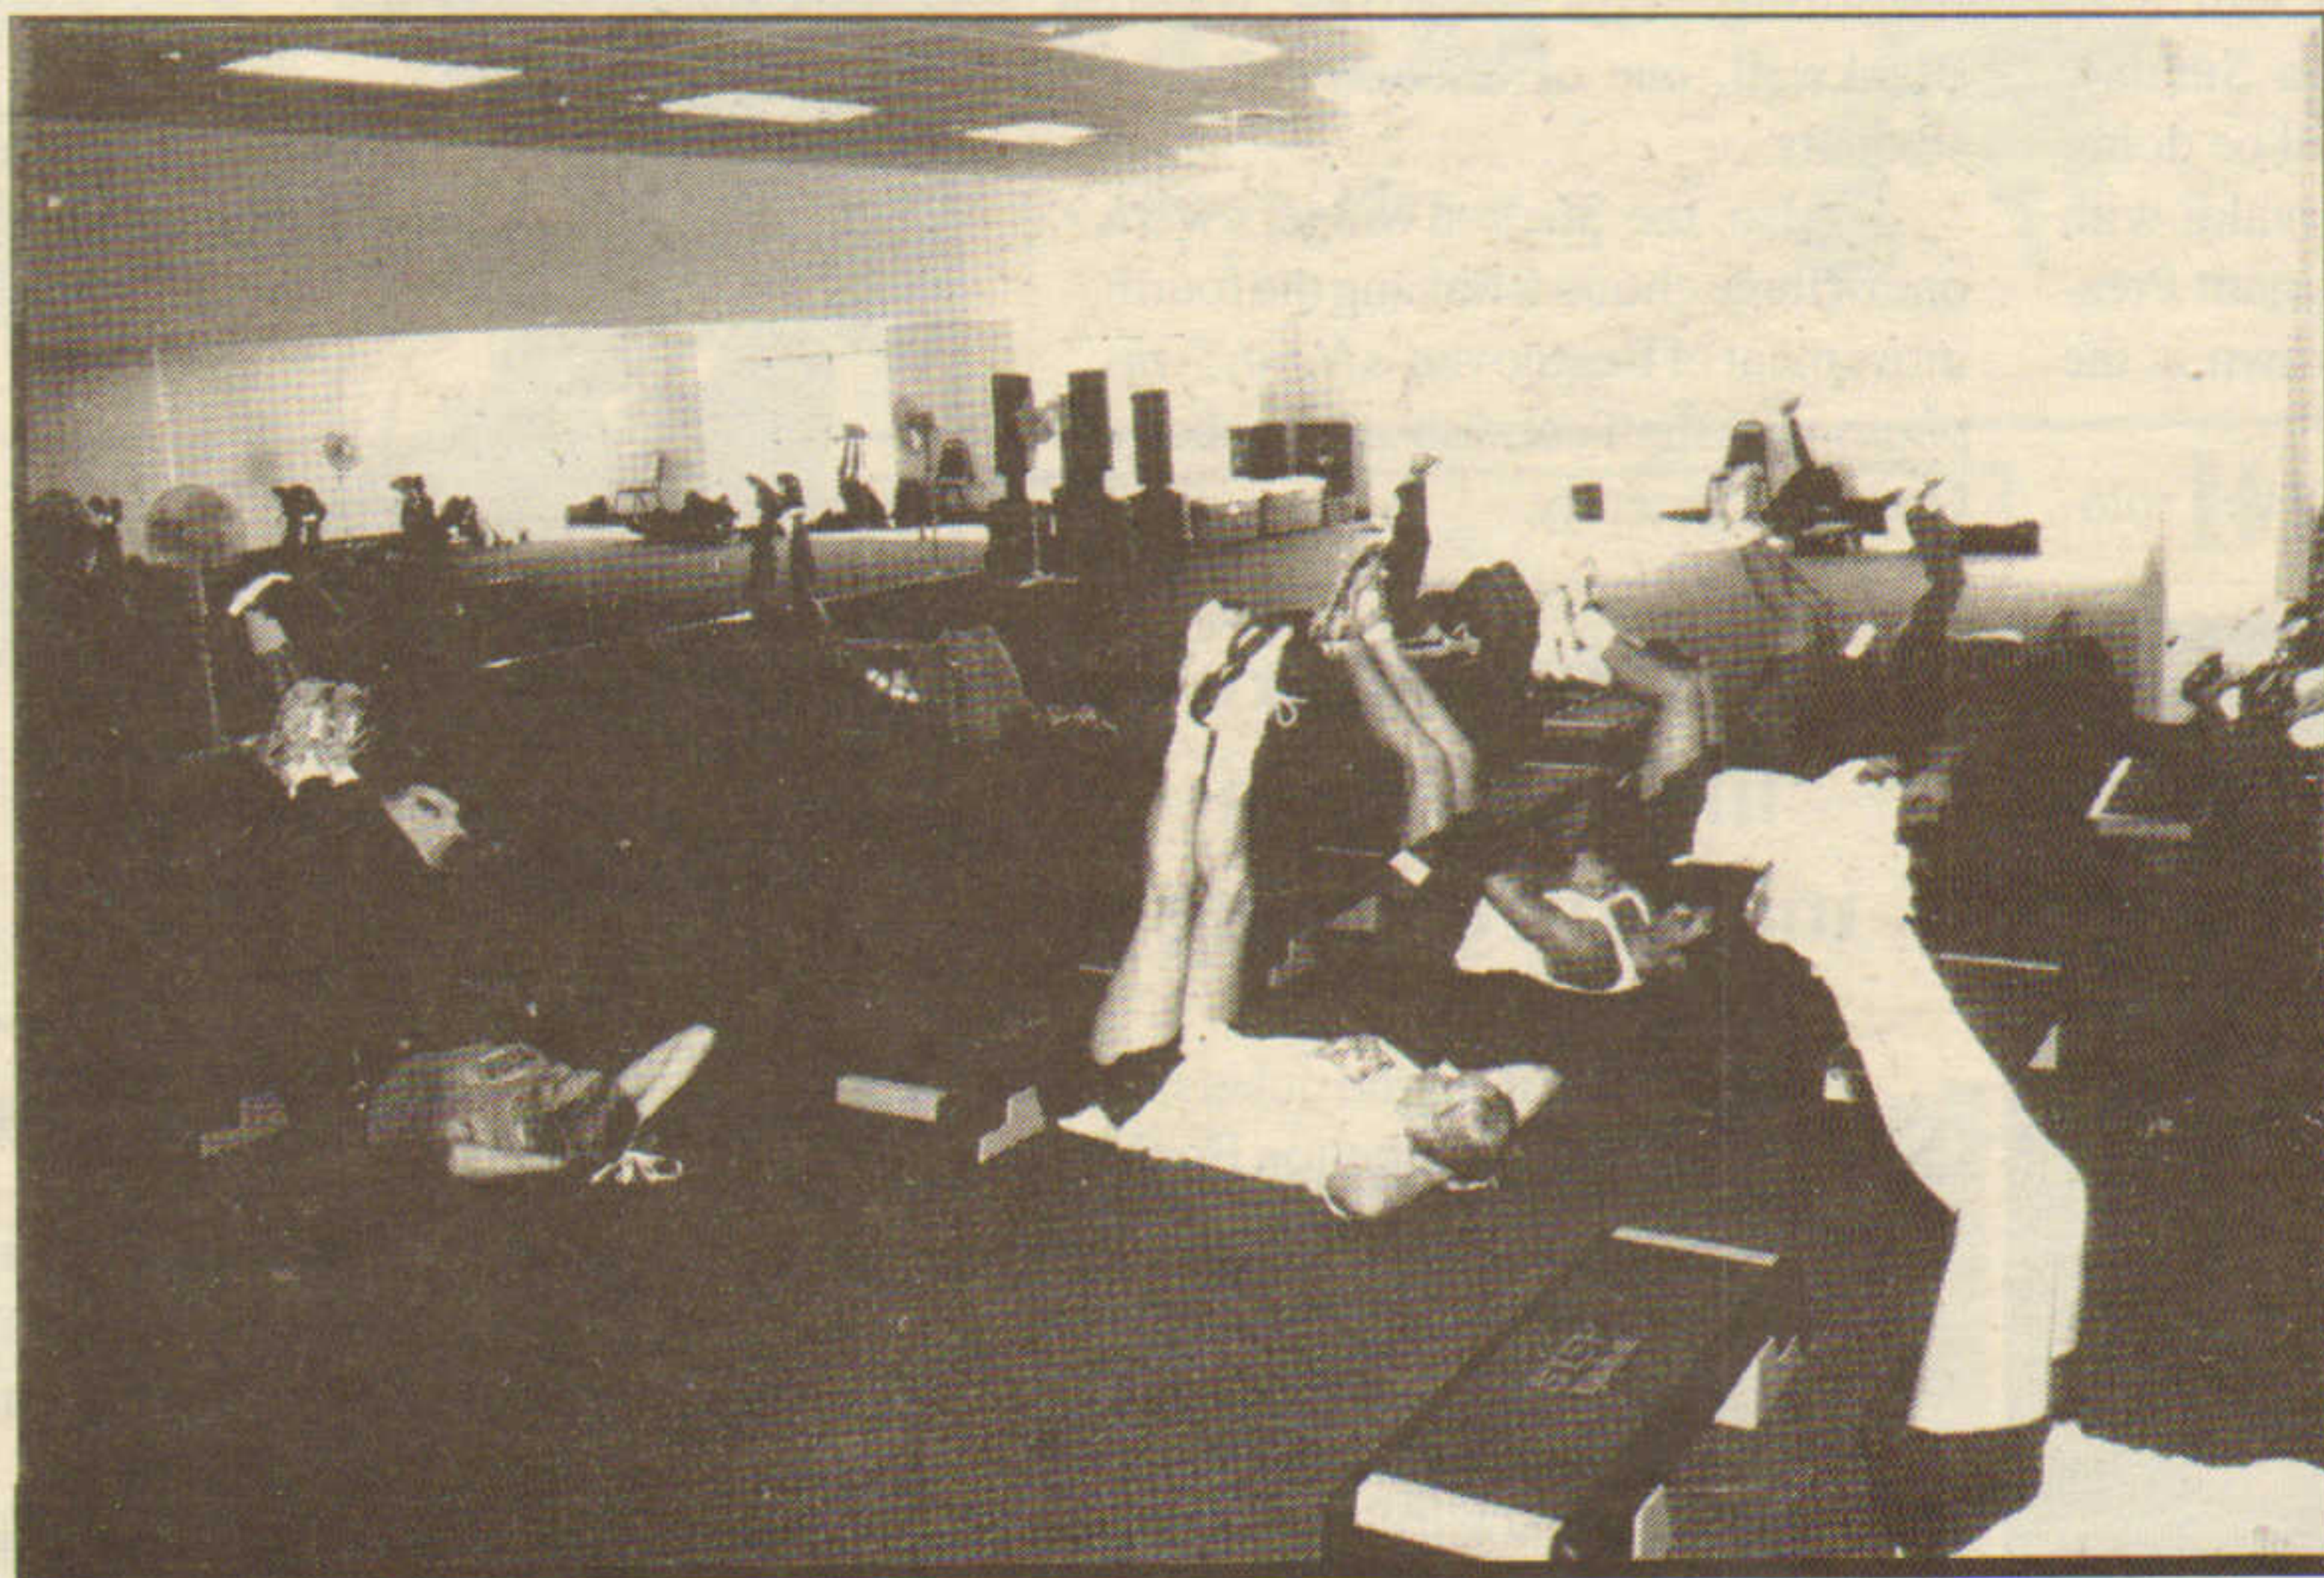

By Matthew Ochocki

The search for a gym is over with, if you read my previous article, but now its time to categorize all the gyms to meet your specifications. If you are a female and serious about working out. Then Cory Everson Fitness for Women is the gym you would most likely be interested in.

Guys, if your real goal when you go to a gym is to get a date then your best bet would be the UA Recreation Center. There is plenty of equipment there to get you in shape, but also many distractions to keep you from the job at hand.

If you are serious into working out and make it a lifestyle then my personal recommendation would be Gold's Gym Aerobics, Fitness South or Body Tech Fitness. All three of these clubs are more than adequate in building your body how you see fit.

Another facility which has a little bit of everything is our very own Wellness Center located on the first floor of the Shelton State Community College

Campus. Wellness Center is equipped with a weight training room, aerobics and dance room and super circuit room. For students looking for advanced fitness training there is a power lifting room located on the 2nd floor.

The Wellness Center has a variety of classes to choose from, ranging from practical nutrition, stress management, personal health, first-aid and CPR. It also has a variety of exercise classes ranging from relaxed, low impact, yoga-like stretching and deep breathing to high impact kick-boxing classes.

The Wellness Center is not an ordinary health club where you pay a monthly fee to be a member. You have to register for classes in order to use the facility.

If you are interested in this field for a career as a personal trainer or exercise instructor, Dr. Milady Murphy, the director of the Wellness Center, has eleven certificate program which you can receive of the Well-ness Center. If you can't catch up with Murphy on campus, you might want to tune in on Fitness Friday with Kip Tyner and Wellness Wednesday with Phillip Coleman on Ch. 49.

The Fantastiks provides a learning experience and fun!

By Claire Parkerson

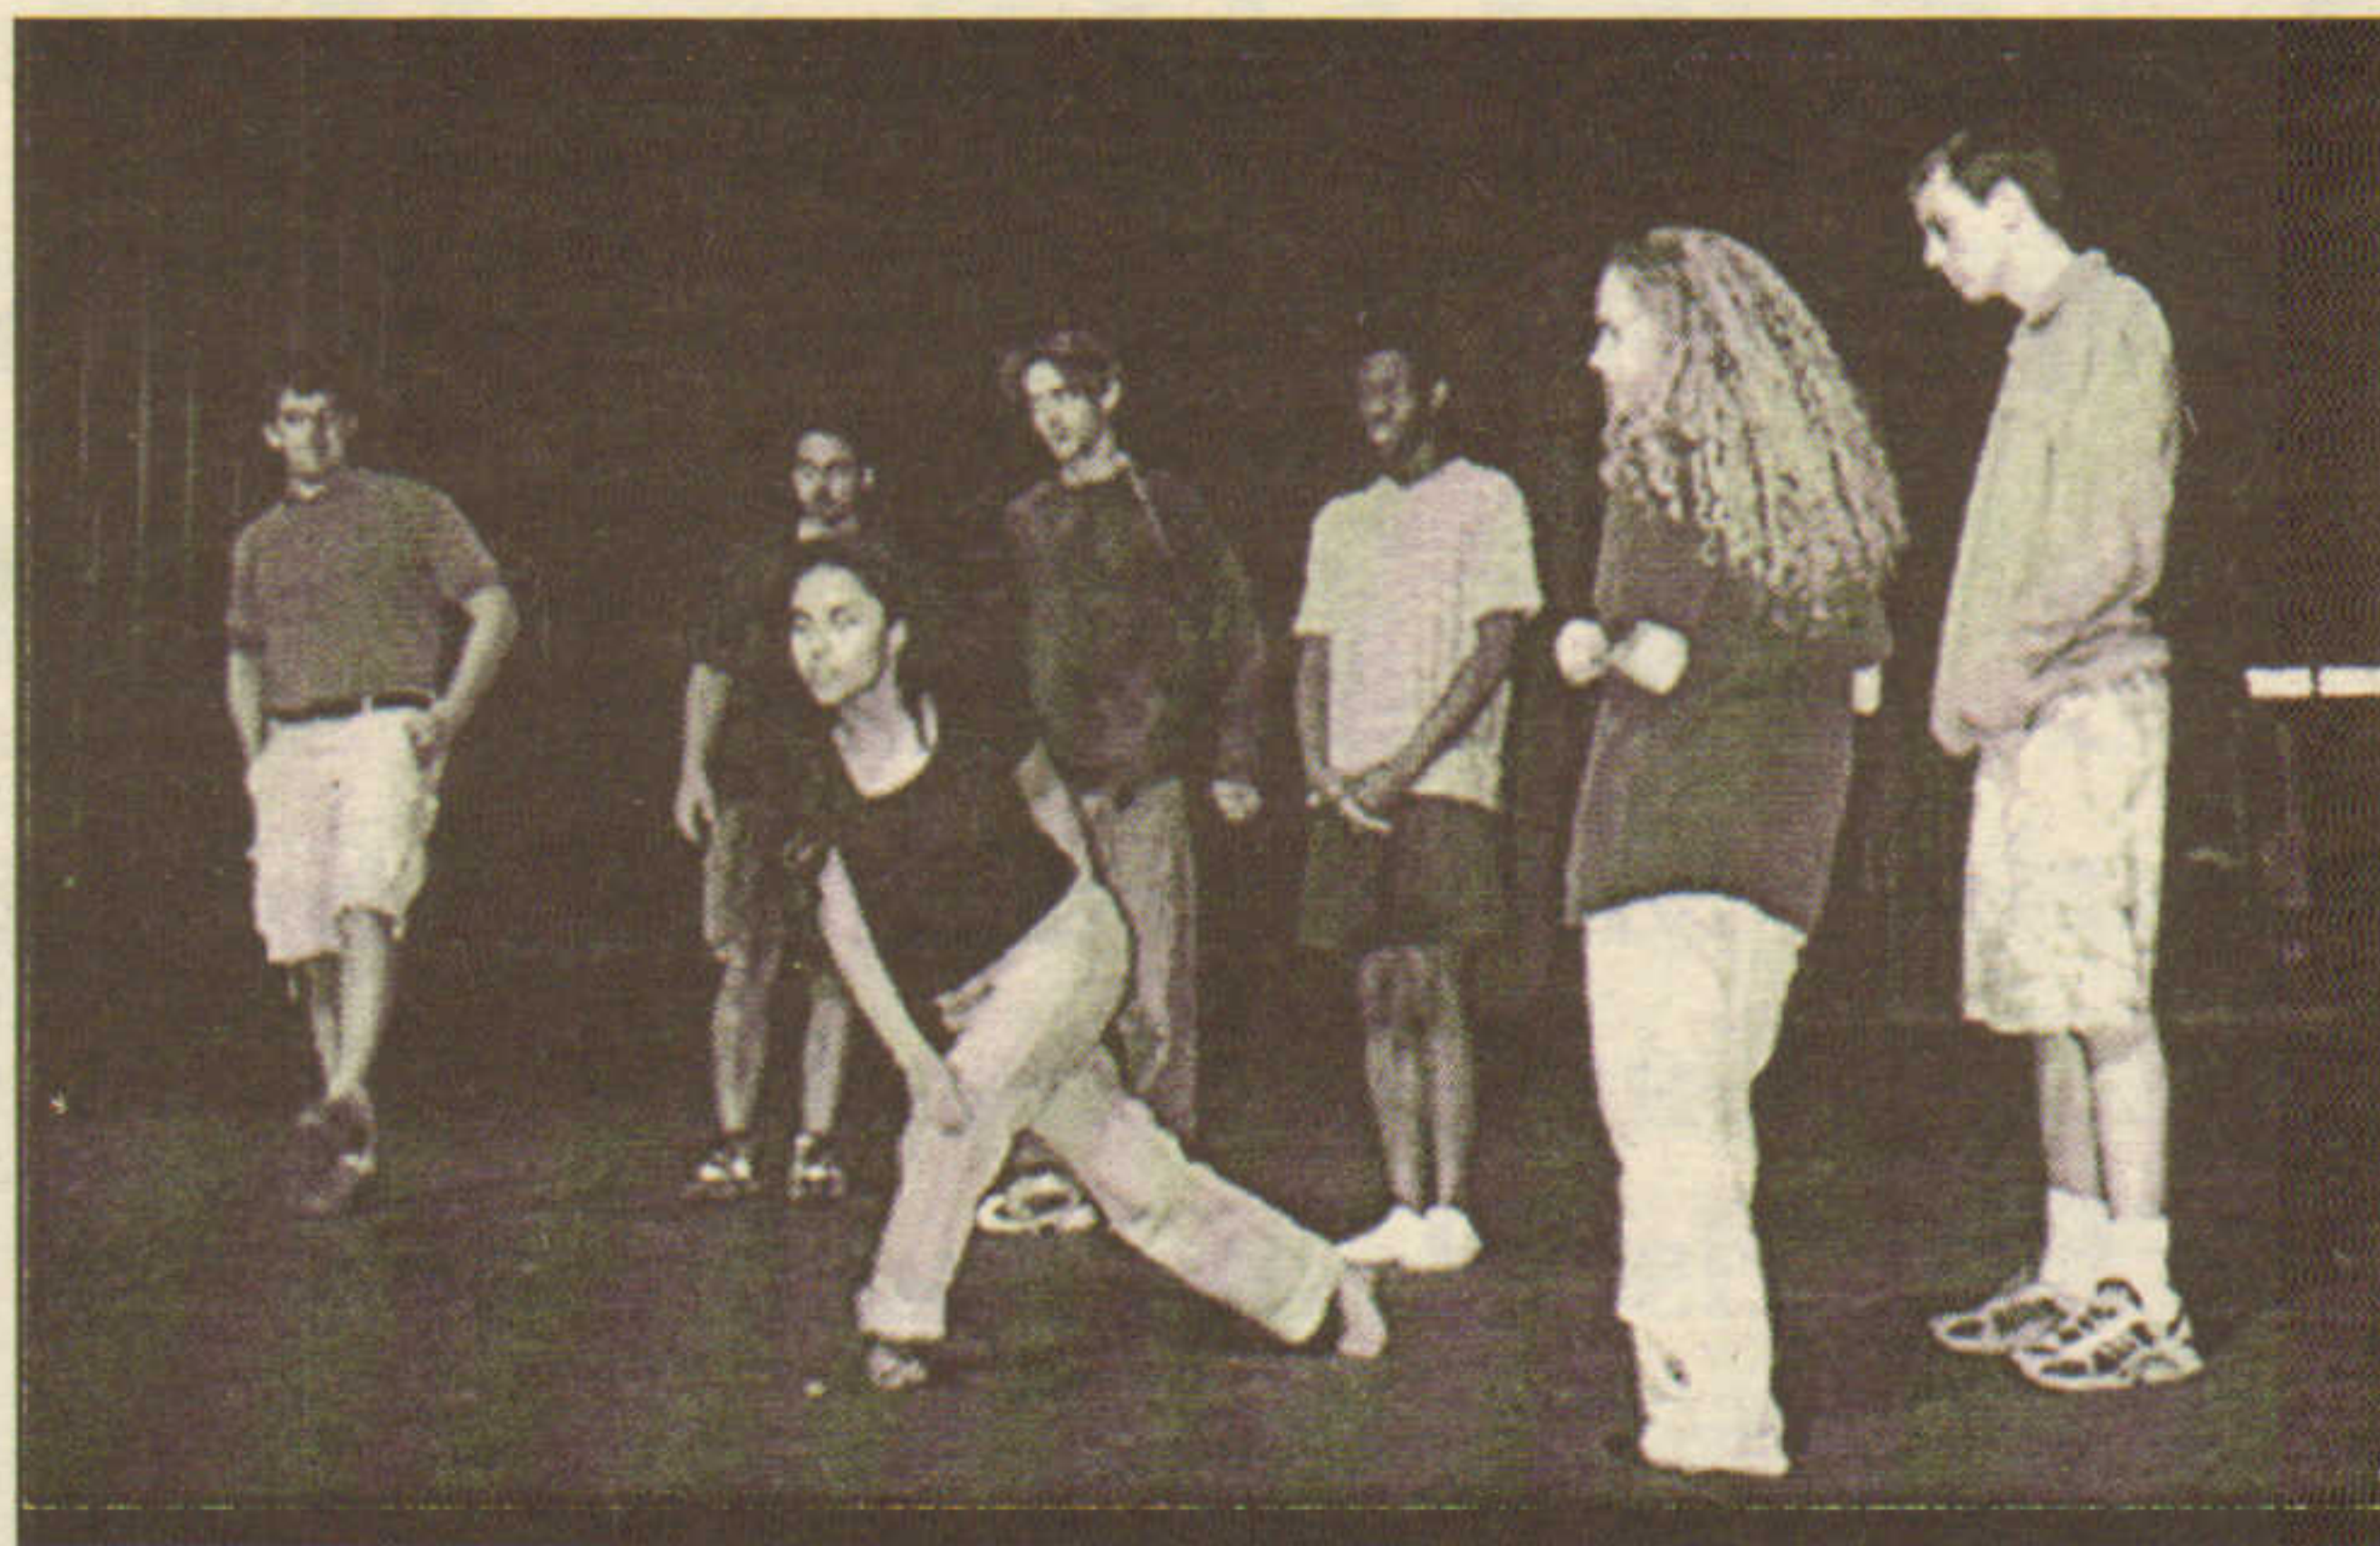

Shelton State students are working hard to present to you their very own version of The Fantastiks.

The musical has been running Off-Broadway since 1960, and will close this January. It has never run on Broadway, yet has been very success-

This production breaks what is called the fourth wall, which is the imaginary wall that lies between the actors and the audience.

ful. Charles Prosser, the director of the musical, says he's glad Shelton will get a chance to do the show while it is still running.

The Fantastiks is very different than most stage productions in that it includes the audience. This production breaks what is called the fourth wall, which is the imaginary wall that lies between the actors and the audience. The audience knows from the beginning that they are not observing life separate from the theatre and they will also be a part of the production. Allison Wilkes who is a cast member says, "There are no bones about that it's a play."

Prosser is not new to the theatre business. He has been in many productions and has also directed many. Although this is his first time to direct at Shelton State, he has done several others in town.

When asked if he liked directing he said, "Yes, I get to see their vision, and I get to see the whole production."

Although the cast has some experience in community theatres, most of them are new to Shelton State. Many helped with the Theatre Tuscaloosa production of Stepping Out, which delayed rehearsal for this production. Now that Stepping Out is done, the cast rehearses five nights a week, and will be rehearsing even more, closer to the opening night, which will be Nov. 15. The cast seems to like the play and said the music is better than what is usually in other musicals.

Two cast members specifically commented on the music. Tim Sullivan says, "The music doesn't suck," and Janet Hernandez adds, "It's not cheesy and corny." Overall the cast seems to be happy with the progress of the musical and seem to be working very hard.
